Implementing Net.Analysis at SLAC

In this presentation, I'd like to describe our experience this past year using a program called Net.Analysis, made by Net.Genesis. Briefly I will cover:

- Why we chose this product.
- An overview of the product and interfaces.
- Lessons learned and where we are now.

1. Why did we purchase this product?

As is probably the case at most labs, our web server configuration is complicated. Our production web server configuration includes two platforms and three different web server software products.

There are web logs associated with each server, totaling about 7M daily, turn into an unmanageable size for a month of data. Since these 7 servers are intricately linked, following visitors across the servers is important in understanding our audience.

The features I looked for were:

- Ability to handle a variety of web server log file formats.
- Provide automatic daily import of data.
- Provide automatic reports.
- Visitors could be tracked across all imported servers.
- Works with Oracle (8.1), since it is the database we use for institutional data.
- Handle large log files.
- GUI interface fronts end.
- Ability to identify hits from "sensitive countries" lists for our DOE folks.

After an exhaustive search of free, moderately priced, and enterprise style log file analysis tools, I choose Net.Analysis as the tool we would use -- if we could find money to purchase the product. As sometimes happens at year-end, we found the funds at the end of FY99 to purchase the product. Although expensive, it is considerably less than the cost of an FTE (or even part of one) in the SF Bay area. The cost negotiated by the number of servers to be covered and, of course, we received a substantial educational discount. The product was temporarily installed on one of our Unix servers on 9/30/2000, but we did not install the working version on the actual server until June 2000.

Implementing Net.Analysis at SLAC

2. Overview of Net.Analysis

We have version 4.6 for Solaris/Oracle installed on a new Sun E420R server running Solaris v2.6. This is a 4x450 MHz processor system with 4 GB of RAM. Two instances of Oracle are required: one to store data and one to store application meta data.

You will need the full cooperation of your Oracle DBA to install this product! In our case it gave them an excuse to purchase a new Unix server so they were pretty accomodating.

This product downloads the data in each server log file into an Oracle database, based on specifications established by the administrator, and the data is then available for analysis using a variety of tools.

Program Administration

Net.Analysis Administrator Console

Web-based interface to the administration tools to set-up each server site, establish import specifications, publish standard reports, schedule imports or report generation, and manage each data site. The interface is fairly easy to use, but there is a two-day training course to get the administrator started. I would highly recommend this training!

For the Unix folks, all of the web based console functions can be run as command line instructions on the Unix server where the product is installed.

Data Access

Net.Analysis Reporter

This is the administrator access to all the reports and configuration and is installed on a Dell GX1 600 MHz computer with 256 M Ram running NT 4, SP6. It does require a connection to Oracle.

There are over 150 preprogrammed reports and the ability to create ad hoc reports. You can choose to report based on data from a single server or all servers. You do not want to have very many people with access to this product since changes in reports and report sets can propagate, usually unintentionally, to the reports generated by the other two ways to access the data.

- Filters are created in this module. Once created they are available to HTML Reporter.
- Reports generated in this interface have drill-down capability -- that is, part of the and be further analyzed.
- Reports, once generated, can be exported into a variety of formats (HTML, Word, Excel, Text).

Sample Report - Visits Per Week for the Last 6 Months -- Word Document

Sample Report - Browser Summary -- Excel Spreadsheet

Sample Report -- Clickstream from Detailed.html -- HTML (and very big)

HTML Reporter

This module allows any web author to generate reports for their site using any of the single reports or report sets available in the Reporter and using the filters created in the Reporter. This module is installed on the same Dell computer and works with a web server (Apache on NT - beta!) running on that computer and access is restricted to onsite.

A nice feature of this data access system is that the user can set up the exact parameters of the report they want to see and then bookmark the settings, so they will be able to generate the same report consistently.

The screenshots show the following steps in the netAnalysis HTML Reporter:

- Initial Configuration: A screen with a "Select Data" dropdown menu and a "Start Query" button. It includes a copyright notice for 1999.
- Report Selection: A screen titled "netAnalysis HTML Reporter" showing a list of reports under "netAnalysis HTML Reporter" and a "Start Query" button. It includes a copyright notice for 1999.
- Settings for Report: "Average Daily Visits by Day of Week": A screen with a "Settings for Report: 'Average Daily Visits by Day of Week'" title. It includes a "Show Data" button and a "Start Query" button. It includes a copyright notice for 1999.
- Report Generation: A screen titled "netAnalysis HTML Reporter" showing a "Report Name: Average Daily Visits by Day of Week" and a "Start Query" button. It includes a copyright notice for 1999.
- Average Daily Visits by Day of Week: A screen showing a 3D bar chart titled "Average Daily Visits by Day of Week". The chart shows the number of visits per day of the week. Below the chart is a table with columns "Day of Week" and "Visits".

Once we really get this product fully implemented and in use, this module will need to be moved to a real web server. The reports can take a very long time to generate.

Sample Report - Average Daily Visits to WWW

Report Site

This interface to the data shows preprogrammed reports and report sets, scheduled through the Administrator Console, and displayed through a calendar like interface.

There are fatal JavaScript errors using this interface with IE 4! Use Netscape or IE5.

The image displays three screenshots of the ReportSite web interface. The top screenshot shows a calendar view for October 2000, with days of the week and dates. Below the calendar is a section for 'Available Daily Reports' for October 18, 2000, listing reports like 'WWW - Daily Summary Report'. The bottom screenshot shows a sample report titled 'WWW - Daily Summary Report' for October 18, 2000. It includes a 'Report Set Description' section with a list of links and a 'Requests Per Hour for the Previous Day' section with a line graph showing traffic peaks.

The reports can be saved as HTML, Word Documents, Excel Documents, and in various text formats. They can be saved to the web server where the program resides or to a local file system. Users can self-subscribe to receive specific reports by email.

3. Lessons Learned/ Where We Are Now

Getting this product installed and fully operational is not an easy process. Net.Genesis recommends 1 FTE as the administrator. Since this is only one part of my job, I can't spend as much time on it as it probably deserves. Some of the problems encountered so far include:

Log File Naming Scheme

The Apache logs were named using the "seconds since" some date format, which is not intuitive to the user and not recognized by Net.Analysis. To fix this problem the Net.Analysis technician tried to write a Perl script that would copy the file each night to the Unix server and then rename the file. When run from the command line, the script worked just fine. When run as a cron job, the script wouldn't work. It turned out to be an AFS/Token issue. The technician was not very familiar with AFS and couldn't solve the problem.

Incomplete Data

The Apache logs were not collecting all the data - it was configured to common log file format rather than extended log file format. So, although the files could be sewn, only part of the data was there for Apache. We have about 1.5 months of missing referral data.

Location of the Logs

Net.Analysis could not reach the NT computer where the NT server logs were being stored. Our Unix Web server admin had to set up a cron job to move the files over to a Unix location each night. This worked out well - these log files can now be included in an archival system.

Scheduler

The Scheduler feature of the Administrator Console is not working properly for the NT server logs. There is a bug that causes problems with multiple log files going into a single datastore - five files are apparently imported but it turns out the same file is imported into five sites. It wasn't until I actually started working at the data that I realized the problem. Lesson: look at the data! It is hoped that patches to the program will fix this problem.

Where are we now?

- All the log files are in a location reachable by Net. Analysis and named appropriately.
- The Unix log files are being imported nightly and sewn together. Reports are being generated nightly.

- Manual import of the NT log files works, but automatic import is not working. (Actually we need to delete several months of bad data.) Reports are being generated when manual imports take place.
  - Some training materials are provided online for end users. We still need to create a training program for our decentralized web support staff.
  - Really look at the data!
