Web History

Our local Web-father, Paul Kunz, recently gave his talk on the History of the Web at guess where? CERN! They were kind enough to put the talk on line at http://webcast.cern.ch/Projects/WebLectureArchive/kunz/. You can also see and hear Paul in person when he repeats his talk for the InterLab99 conference that will be held at SLAC. Paul’s talk is Thursday, November 4, from 12:45-1:45 in Panofsky Auditorium. The SLAC community is also invited to other open talks. Check the agenda at http://www-project.slac.stanford.edu/interlab99/.

Security Stand Down

A reminder that if you missed the security stand down, there is a make up session on Tuesday, October 26 from 10 am to 12 noon in Panofsky Auditorium. If you miss the make up, a video is available for viewing. Reserve the video through P.A. Moore at x2605.

Redesigned Compensation Program

Campus is working on a new compensation program which the Stanford Report outlined in the October 13 issue. What does this new plan mean for employees? Three things: job classifications will be streamlined, the pay structure will be more competitive, and pay administration will be more flexible. The new plan is scheduled for implementation early next year. The redesign is partly in response to the hot competitive market for employees facing the Bay Area. SLAC will be involved since we are Stanford employees.
