Computer Training for ES&H Orientation Available

ES&H is now offering computer based training (CBT) for “Employee Orientation to ES&H” (EOESH). EOESH is SLAC-required training for all personnel who work at SLAC more than 60 days. The CBT EOESH is currently available at seven satellite locations in SLAC. You can find them listed on the ES&H Training website. For more information about this and other ES&H Training, please see the ES&H website or contact the Training Coordinator, Rod Hiemstra.

Chinese New Year Celebration for the SLAC Community

Come celebrate Chinese New Year at a special lunch on Monday, February 3, 12-2pm, at the Fu Lam Mum Restaurant in Mountain View. The cost is $12 per person, including tax and tips. The nine-course lunch menu includes peking duck, walnut prawn, vegetables and other delicious foods. Members of the SLAC community are welcome. Please contact Carol Tam (ext. 4273) to reserve your spot. Also, find out about the upcoming Chinese New Year Parade in San Francisco.

What's New in FrontPage 2002

Discover your inner Web guru at a special demonstration Friday, January 17th from 9:30 - 11:30 a.m. in the Computer Center (Bldg 50), 3rd floor Conference Rooms. Ruth McDunn, SLAC's Web Information Manager, will show some of the new FrontPage features enabled with the upgrade of our Windows Web servers. Topics will include creating site navigation, integrating with databases, viewing site statistics, and more.

The Quest for Quark-Gluon Plasma Continues

Hot off the Interactions.org newswire: Scientists at Brookhaven National Lab are continuing their quest for an elusive form of matter, but this time with a twist -- instead of colliding gold ions at nearly the speed of light in the Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider (RHIC), they are colliding gold ions with deuterium ions in an attempt to help unravel the mystery. Find out more.
