Accident Management Bulletin Available

ES&H has published an Accident Scene Management Bulletin to advise the SLAC community on three basic steps to take after an accident. Included also is information about preserving the accident scene, so that SLAC can learn how to prevent similar accidents in the future. Please read the Bulletin and learn how you can help do the right thing if an accident happens in your area!

New Transportation Office Hours

Effective June 2, 2003 the Transportation Office hours will be from 7:00 a.m. thru 3:00 p.m. If there is an emergency after 3:00 p.m., please call the Service Desk at ext. 8901.

Be Aware: Construction Around Building 645

Starting Monday, June 9, work will begin to reinforce a retaining wall located below Building 645. This will allow a 67,000-pound RF transformer to be installed adjacent to the wall, immediately after the wall is reinforced. During the work, 10-inch square and 30 foot long steel members (about 2,000 pounds each) can impose a significant safety risk to people, so please be very careful in this area. Scientists working in Bldg. 645 will be directed to use the alternative entrance, and parking will be limited because of the construction equipment. The door to Bldg. 641 will be secured, the ramp to the door will be removed, warning barriers will be posted, and the immediate work area will be blocked off. For more information, contact Ernest Miholits at Ext. 4888.

Cool Site: Science Everywhere

The American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) has launched a new initiative focused on science literacy. "Science. It's Everywhere" will feature television, radio, magazine, and newspaper advertising and a Web site to help motivate parents and families to take action in helping their children learn science. The initiative focuses special attention on minority and Hispanic audiences and will feature Spanish language versions of the Web site and other materials.
